

How do Brands evolve? An Exploration of Brand Co-Creation Performances

Lars Griebel
University of Bayreuth
Tim Ströbel
University of Bayreuth

Cite as:

Griebel Lars, Ströbel Tim (2022), How do Brands evolve? An Exploration of Brand Co-Creation Performances. Proceedings of the European Marketing Academy, 51st, (107103)

Paper from the 51st Annual EMAC Conference, Budapest, May 24-27, 2022

How do Brands evolve? An Exploration of Brand Co-Creation Performances

Abstract

Recent branding research adopts a multi-actor perspective, stating that brands are co-created through the performances of multiple actors. This study aims to explore the performances of different actors to better comprehend the dynamic nature of brands. In a single case study, the sports brand FC St. Pauli serves as research context. In the context of sports brands, the multiactor perspective becomes particularly evident - they therefore provide an exceptional context to examine the process of brand co-creation. Our research shows how brands evolve in a continuous process in which multiple actors perform seven distinct but interrelated brand co-creation performances. Five performances are derived from previous research, while two novel brand co-creation performances emerge: 'directing brand strategy' and 'facilitating' performances. Our research contributes to branding literature by refining the understanding of how brands evolve through the performances of multiple actors.

Keywords: brand co-creation performances; brand identity; brand meaning

Track: Product and Brand Management